NATIONAL WHIG NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT, GENERAL WINFIELD SCOTT

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

Rally, Whigs! Rally, Whigs!! Ratification Meeting at Alexandria on Thursday Night, July 8.

WILLIAM A. GRAHAM,

OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Those Whigs who intend to accept the invitation to attend the above meeting will assemble at the City Hall at 71 o'clock to-morrow evening. The boat will leave the wharf at 8 o'clock precisely. A band of music will be in attendance.

The Whigs of Washington City. There is work for us to do, and the time has come in which we should be active and vigilant. Let us not permit it to pass idly by. From every section of the country we are cheered by glorious signs of success. The enthusiasm of the people is awakened, and the cry of Scott and GRAHAM is borne on every passing breeze.

We refer to the minutes of a preliminary meeting held in this city last evening, from which our readers will perceive that they have a duty to perform. Let every Whig be present to inscribe his name upon the list, and let him be sure to be present at the meeting on next Monday evening. The Club to be organized will be heard and felt throughout the whole Union, and it is important that it should be properly organized and officered. Timely notice is therefore given, and such as do not attend cannot hereafter murmur that they have not participated in the work now in progress.

The Union quotes from the Cincinnati Inquirer the only effort we have seen of late to set General Pierce right on the religious test question.

"They [the Whigs] tell all foreigners not to vote for him, because he was born in the United States, whose constitution excluded all adopted citizens forever from being President or Vice President: and

'They tell the Catholies not to vote for him, because he was born in New Hampshire, whose constitution debars all Catholics from office." Neither of these assertions is correct. The first is almost too great an absurdity for the columns of the Inquirer or Union; and the second is a paltry attempt to whip around a trouble these papers cannot get over. The real point is this: "An Old Countryman," through the columns of a Democratic paper at Cincinnati, urged against General Pierce the charge that he had opposed the abolition of the religious test in New Hampshire, and his charge of Thomas C. Connolly chairman, and A. B. was copied into several Whig papers. George M. Dallas, in a public speech in Philadelphia replied to the charge, by asserting that General Pierce was in favor of the repeal, and that the Whigs of New Hampshire had opposed it. The National Intelligencer thereupon proved from the record that the religious test had been perpetuated by the votes of the Democrats of New Hampshire!

His friends claim for him that General Pierce then voted with the Whigs; but if he did, his influence must certainly have been very limited in his own party.

We have seen many boasts in the Democratic papers of the pure democracy of New Hampshire. We love the true spirit of democracy, but not that which disfranchises men on account of their religious opinions.

Scott in the South.

Among the Southern Whig papers opposed than the Petersburg Intelligencer. It was undoubtedly honest in its convictions and its preferences for another. What is now its language?

" Upon whatever other points Gen. Scott may be assailed, his position on the platform is altogether impregnable. * * The day has gone by when the American people can be persuaded that Winfield Scott is either a rogue or a coward. Had about the shoulder, one of which entered the his love of money been able to overcome his love of country, he would have listened to Mexico's the neighbors, and expired almost instantly. million of money and an imperial diadem; and had he been a coward, successive Presidents of the United States, including Jackson and Polk, would never have entrusted him with the command of the gallant armies of the Union. It says little for Jackson or Polk, when the charge is made that they entrusted the safety and honor of the country to the keeping of a

"But what a marvellous change has taken place in the Democracy in the last four years. In 1848, when General Taylor was before the country as a candidate for the Presidency, the Democracy were excessively indignant, because, as a military man was to be the candidate of the Whigs, they had not selected Scott instead of Taylor Scott had claims upon the Whig party which, in their estimation, were a thousand-fold stronger than those of Old Zac. But now it is quite another thing, and Scott, after all their glorification, turns out, according to their account, to be a rogue and a coward; and the beauty of the operation is, that if they tell the truth now, they must have known it at the very time when they were besmearing him with their praises—for these charges were based on occurrence were alleged to have transpired as far back as 1809 or '10. Such is Democratic consistency, and such it will ever be."

Messrs. Stephens and Company refuse to support General Scott because, as they profess to think, he does not avow himself with sufficient distinctness in favor of the "finality of the Compromise:" and, in either a direct or indirect manner, give their support to the Democratic party of their States, which is made up in good part of avowed Secessionists. Patriotic Messrs. Stephens and Company!

The Island.

The wonderful improvement of this section of the city now going on excites the admiration of every one who looks upon it. We are informed by a careful observer that there are at this time one hundred and twenty-four houses finishing and in progress of erection-twenty-four brick, and one hundred framed.

A copy of the declaration was then directed to be placed in the hands of the above ward committees for additional signatures, prior to a more perfect organization; and then the meeting adjourned until next Monday evening, at the same

The Baltimore Tragedy.

On Sunday evening about 9 o'clock, a man named William Williams killed his wife and stabbed a man named Samuel Abbot. Williams and his wife had separated a short time since, and on Saturday last she had moved into the house in which the occurrence took place. On Sunday evening he went to the rear of the house and gained admittance into the yard by jumping over the fence, and found Abbot, of whom he had been jealous, sitting in the back room, Mrs. Williams at the time sitting on the steps leading up stairs, conversing with him. Williams immeto Gen. Scott, none was more firm and inflexible diately rushed upon Abbot, inflicting two deep and severe wounds upon him.

Mrs. Williams then stepped between them, and threw her arms around her husband, and Abbot kind hearted, humane man." made his way out of the house, and ran to his mother's, a short distance off. Williams then attacked his wife and inflicted three wounds about the shoulder, one of which entered the the neighbors, and expired almost instantly.

He then surrendered himself to the watchmen, saying he had done the deed. He was conveyed to the watch-house, and thence to jail for an examination.

When Williams was informed at the watchnouse that his wife was dead, he wept, but said : 'Any one would do as he had done!" We do ot think with him.

Abbot's wounds, though of a very serious and painful nature, are not thought, under ordinary circumstances, likely to prove fatal.

These volumes are written in the form of a narrative of rambles, and the incidents and conversations that occur cannot fail to interest readers of every age. The author asserts that his design was to communicate as extensive and varied information as possible in respect to the geography, the scenery, the customs, and the institutions of this country, and at the same time to infuse into his work the elements of a salutary moral influence. He has performed his task in a highly satisfactory manner, and many a juvenile student, and many a prudent and discerning parent, will thank him for the results of his judicious labors. For our copies of these books we are indebted to the politeness of Messrs. Taylor & Maury.

"Fuss and Feathers!"

This epithet is used in derision by all of our dversaries. Whence came it? Its origin is said o have become a matter of grave inquiry among the learned political philologists. It appears to lime as above.—Prof. Dewey. be more venerable, however, than they have upposed. The Covington (Ky.) Journal says

"The epithet, 'Fuss and Feathers,' was first applied to Scott at Lundy's Lane, by the British. The tall hero went into the fight with a very arge plume, and was so active and earnest hurrying on and encouraging his men—first at one point, then at another—that the enemy thought he was a little fussy. Scott, with his tall form, large plume, and dashing gallantry, was a conpicuous mark for the bullets of the British. had two horses killed under him, was shot in the side, afterwards in the shoulder, and finally had his feathers shot off. After that the British called him 'Fuss and Feathers.'"

The Union on Gen. Scott. Mr. Ritchie was editor of the Union in 1848, and here is what he said of Gen. Scott: "Gen. Scott is an older soldier than General laylor, one who is at least equally if not more by more and as brilliant battles during the warho captured Vera Cruz and the Castle, and the capital of Mexico, and one, too, who has more qualities of a civilian, and is better known as Whig.

The Proud General.

The New York Mirror tells the following start,

Some four years ago, a young man called at our office to subscribe for the Weekly Mirror. In the course of conversation, he stated that he was a ladies, and was in the passage.

The same offence was committed at Senator Gwin's brillms of the corporation of the city and the legis ature of the State, he had been off to Wisconsin bought a farm, opened a store, and was already postmaster of the village. His bright eye, energetic manner, and manly determination to fight his own way through the world, interested us at once; and on bidding him good-bye, as he left the office, we remarked, "we shall next hear from you as a member of the legislature."

This morning we had a visit from the young man, whose first words were: "Your prediction has been fulfilled. I have been a memb legislature and a clerk of the House." "How are your politics?" we asked. His reply was: "I saved my life, I shall vote for Scott."

" How is that?" "Why, sir, when I was lying on the stone floor in the Hospital at Jalapa, parched with fever, and covered with sores, with no one to look after me, covered with sores, with no one to look after me, Gen. Scott came in and went around among all the sick and wounded. He came to me and asked if I was wounded. I told him I was not; but I tures are discarded. The six astonishing combinations in was your sick and could not live more about the great advancement now in operation in the medical world. New light blazes up, and old practices and old mixtures are discarded. The six astonishing combinations in if I was wounded. I told him I was not; but I tures are discarded. The six astonishing combinations in was very sick, and could not live many days. "Don't talk so," said the General. He then asked me if I was well tended. I told him I had no atmy feeble arm, felt of my pulse, examined my fever sores, and sent for the surgeon, and asked class that are acquainted with its surprising virtues. him why I was thus neglected. The Surgeon jy 7—1t sent for his Assistant, who, in turn, sent for the Steward of the Hospital. The General charged them to take good care of me; and, on leaving, told me, if they did not, to report at once to him. So, you see, sir, he saved my life by his kindness, as he did hundreds of others, and I should be so he did hundreds of the control of the say he is scoundred not to vote for him. They say he is experienced, he begs leave to promise the exercise of the proud. So he is on horseback—on the battle utmost energies hereafter to merit the approbation so liberated the control of the say o

This is a true story, and a story to tell.

Messrs. Stephens and Company. The Baltimore Clipper says:

"We do not look upon the objections by the gentlemen above named as valid against General Scott. The Convention which nominated him first passed a platform of principles; among which was an express recognition of the Com-promise measures, including the fugitive slave law, and a pledge of its party and its candidate that said law should be duly enforced. The platform was erected that the candidate who might be nominated should know the principles upon which it was expected that he would conduct the government if elected. His acceptance of the nomination upon the conditions prescribed amounted to as direct and binding a pledge as though he had approved, item by item, every principle embraced in the platform. He took the nomination with the conditions annexed; and must comply with them if elected, or forfeit hi honor to the country, which it can hardly be suspected Gen. Scott would do for 'a little brief authority.'

"As to his being supported by Abolitionists, it would seem to be ridiculous to impute it to him as an offence. Both General Scott and General Pierce are pledged to the Compromise acts; and, in that respect, Abolitionists have no choice, excepting as may regard personal preference or at-tachment to party. The election of either will secure the continuance of the fugitive slave law; and we presume that neither will refuse to receive votes even of the Abolitionists.'

ORGANIZE .- Let every friend of Old Chippewa remember that we have a wily foe to contend with. There is work to do. Our gallant leader never won a battle until he had drilled his regulars and organized his volunteers. Thirty-nine years ago from next Monday, was seen on the ground of Chippewa, in Canada, opposite Buffa o, the hardest fought and most glorious victory of the war of 1812: when General Scott, then but 28 years old, at the head of 1,900 Americans routed and vanquished 2,100 British veterans at the point of the bayonet. But before that battle was fought, Scott drilled his raw recruits at Buffalo six hours a day, for weeks together. Fellow Whigs, let us imitate his example. There are yet, as when General Scott was stationed out here, "Indians about." Let our camp-fires be lighted, our sentinels set, and we will give the Black Hawk of Locofoism, who has so often tomabawked the offspring of the West, a drubbing which will prove a "finality" to his ambition.

In addition to which, private letters state that the Prince President of France has expressed his intention of recalling him forthwith.

For popular reference, we know of ne work which can fill its place. Without any parade of technical terms, it is strictly scientific; the language is plain and simple; the points explained are of great importance; devoted to progress, the editor is no slave to theory; he does not shock the general reader by medical ultraisms; while he forefully demonstrates the benefits of modern improvements. Of all the numerous publications which have obtained such a wide popularity, as issued by Fowlers and Wells, perhaps none are more adapted to general utility than this rich, comprehensive, and well-arranged Encyclopedia.—New York Tribune.
